

Forest Policy Analyst

As a forest policy analyst, you will be responsible for maintaining a working knowledge of current laws, policies, and legislation affecting the forest industry. You will work with lawmakers and government agencies to develop or change legislation, create awareness for industry causes, and raise funds. Most of your work will be done in an office environment, but this job includes extensive travel to meetings and events.

Other job titles include: Climate Advisor, Climate Economist, Climate Analyst.

Education & Training

Most of these occupations require graduate school.

Salary

National Average Salary

$46,920 - $130,770

National Average Hourly

$22.56 - $62.87

This job may be right for you if your interests include: investigative & enterprising.

This job may be right for you if your skills include: reading comprehension, active listening & critical thinking.

This job may be right for you if your values include: achievement, independence & recognition.

